ABSTRACT

Due to the researcher studying the law regarding the case of a vehicle lost from parking in private parking place found that at present, Thailand does not have any laws that prescribe liability for vehicles lost from parking in private parking. As a result, the application of laws and cases of vehicles lost due to parking in private parking places is not clear enough. The Supreme Court's ruling in Thailand still does not have certain rules for the use of the law. The Supreme Court's ruling in Thailand still does not have certain rules for the use of the law. The use of services in various private locations, the car is parked and may be a problem. In the case that the car or motorcycle that the user parked is lost or damaged during the use of that location, those who use the car to park will demand that anyone be responsible for these damages that can occur. According to the laws of Thailand, there is no explicit requirement for this liability. Only the Supreme Court's ruling that had been issued but it is not clear that If there is a case of such a problem, the private parking will be liable for compensation or not and how.

The study revealed that Laws of various countries,such as the United States and the Republic of India, found that when a car or motorcycle in a private parking place lost or damaged during the use of that location; the laws of both countries have specifically stated that in this case, the owner of a private parking place will be liable to the owner of the car or motorcycle. When the problem occurred, the law can be clearly diagnosed in such cases and fair to those who use the parking place.

It was recommended that there should be a specific law regarding the protection of parking in a private parking place in order to cover and be able to adapt to that problem as mentioned with the duty and responsibility of the owner of the parking and the person who uses the service in order to be fair to both parties if there is a case of such problem.
