ABSTRACT

Considering the election system of Thailand in the past decade. Found that an important problem that may not be overlooked is the legal issue of the election of a member of the Parliament that affects the political system of politics. The country has a stable government in the country. Which the democratic countries The country's administrative authority must be trusted by most people. By receiving the election of the Voice, the Government of the government, which is an organization that is used to use sovereignty in the public legal status, is a ruler that consists of the Cabinet by the Parliament system and court. as well as government officials. Management and judicial the author tried in a study understood the problem condition. By study compared to the evolution of the international election system and the Thai election system according to the Constitution of the Kingdom of Thailand, 2540 and 2550, as a guide to enhancing the legal measures of Thai election have a stable government in administering the country.

Study on Thai election Thai people have a way of choosing to set it in style. Select applicants only, but no party is selected. The assumes that the election chooses the party and the applicant who the party is in the same direction, so it is an inconsistency that is not consistent with the fact. By bringing the points of the member to the county of representatives who have lost their members, it is the equivalent of the intent of the election.

In addition to a major issue. There is a high possibility that the mixed member apportionment system is going to add to the original issue and create a new issue. In this mixed member apportionment system, a stable combination of governments must be established. Weak government The political atmosphere will be a bargain of the benefits between the political parties. The likelihood of driving a reform policy to address the country's problems and laying the foundations in the creation of the nation will be at low to low level. The obvious example is that after the general election in 2562 on 24 March 2562, it takes up to 108 days after the election of the government has completed.
